

Book Brigade - January 2025

Embark on your own adventure!

As we already know, the main character in the book is a hobbit called Bilbo Baggins. But if you were the main character of this story, would you be a hobbit or someone else in the Lord of the Rings universe? And perhaps you would like a different name? The choice is yours.

My name:

Character race:

Dwarves (Khazad)

Short, stocky bearded folk who often live underground. They are strong and hardy, able to endure pain, fatigue and suffering, with a great love of craftworks, especially things made of gold, silver, and mithril.

Elves (Eldar)

The oldest and wisest of races of Middle-earth, they are immortal, noble, and fair. Their kind have far clearer sight and perception than Men. They are talented in music and song and have great wilderness skills.

Men

Like you and I, men are people (both male and female) who live in Middle-Earth, most often in cities and dwellings just like we do.

Hobbits

Small people who are a distant relation to men. They are good-natured, hospitable and easygoing folk, two to four feet in height with hair covered feet. Nimble, they live in holes and tunnels.

Character class:

Barbarian:

A warrior of the wilds who may lack some of the refined skills and weapons of other fighting men, but who make up for it with woodcraftiness and ferocity.

Craftsman:

A person skilled in the arts of making, able to craft items both useful and wondrous, or who serves others in some ordinary capacity.

Magician:

One who works magic and casts spells based on learned lore and wisdom, but who is not nearly as powerful as a wizard.

Mariner:

A sailor, one who knows how to work and helm ships great and small over the wide seas and on the Great River.

Minstrel:

A singer of songs, teller of tales, and a chronicler of brave and noble deeds. With his words and music, he can inspire others.

Noble:

A person who, due to birth, wealth, accomplishment, or the like, is regarded as of high rank in society, entitled to deference and respect from other folk.

Rogue:

A person who lives and works with their wits and deft hands, often at questionable pursuits.

Warrior:

People, such as guardsmen, soldiers, and archers, who are trained to fight with weapons.

My backstory:

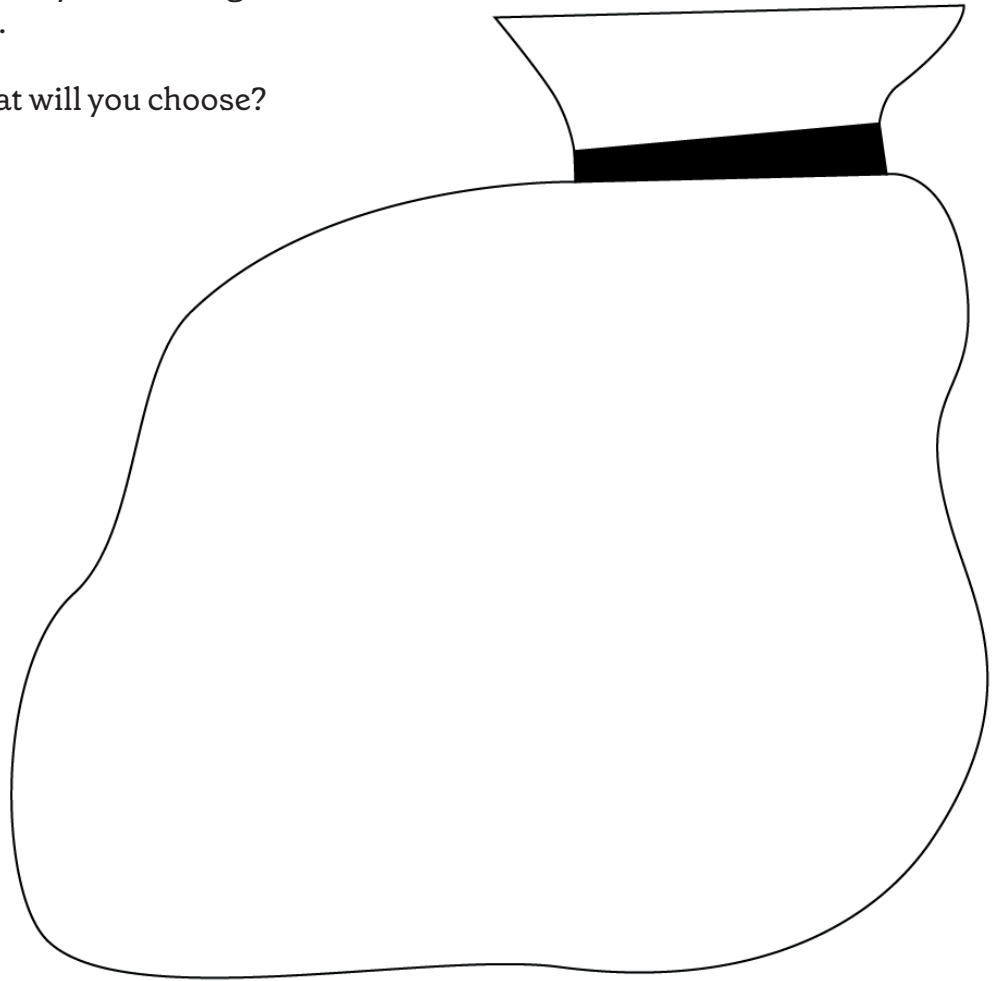

Book Brigade - January 2025

Smaug's treasure haul

Phew! Smaug is no more, and due to your part in the defeat of Smaug, you have been awarded a share in the hoard.

But you've come so far, and can only carry a small number of items back with you. You've got the choice of five treasures.

So many options... What will you choose?
